

Time to check on your calf!

Fluff

Click here to view in Canva

About Your Calf At 4 Months Old

Name:
Fluff

Birthdate:
Sep 5, 2025

Updated Information

(At the time the photos were taken)

Age:
4 Months Old

Height:
40 inches

Weight:
320 pounds

Calf Health is Important

Proactive daily care is key to keeping your calf and herdmates happy and healthy!

Vaccinations

Your calf is vaccinated at 2 and 6 months old to protect her from getting harmful diseases in the future.

Fluff

Now that she is 4 months old, she eats food that has more fiber to help develop the different compartments in her stomach.

New Diet

She enjoys a sweet grain pellet mix which gives her a lot of energy and helps her digestive system develop. She eats 5 pounds of grain each day!

Hay is added to her diet because it is a high-fiber food, perfect for her growth and wellbeing. She can eat as much hay and drink as much water as she wants!

Group Housing

Your calf now lives with a few of her herdmates in a new group pen. She loves hanging out with her new buddies!

New Housing

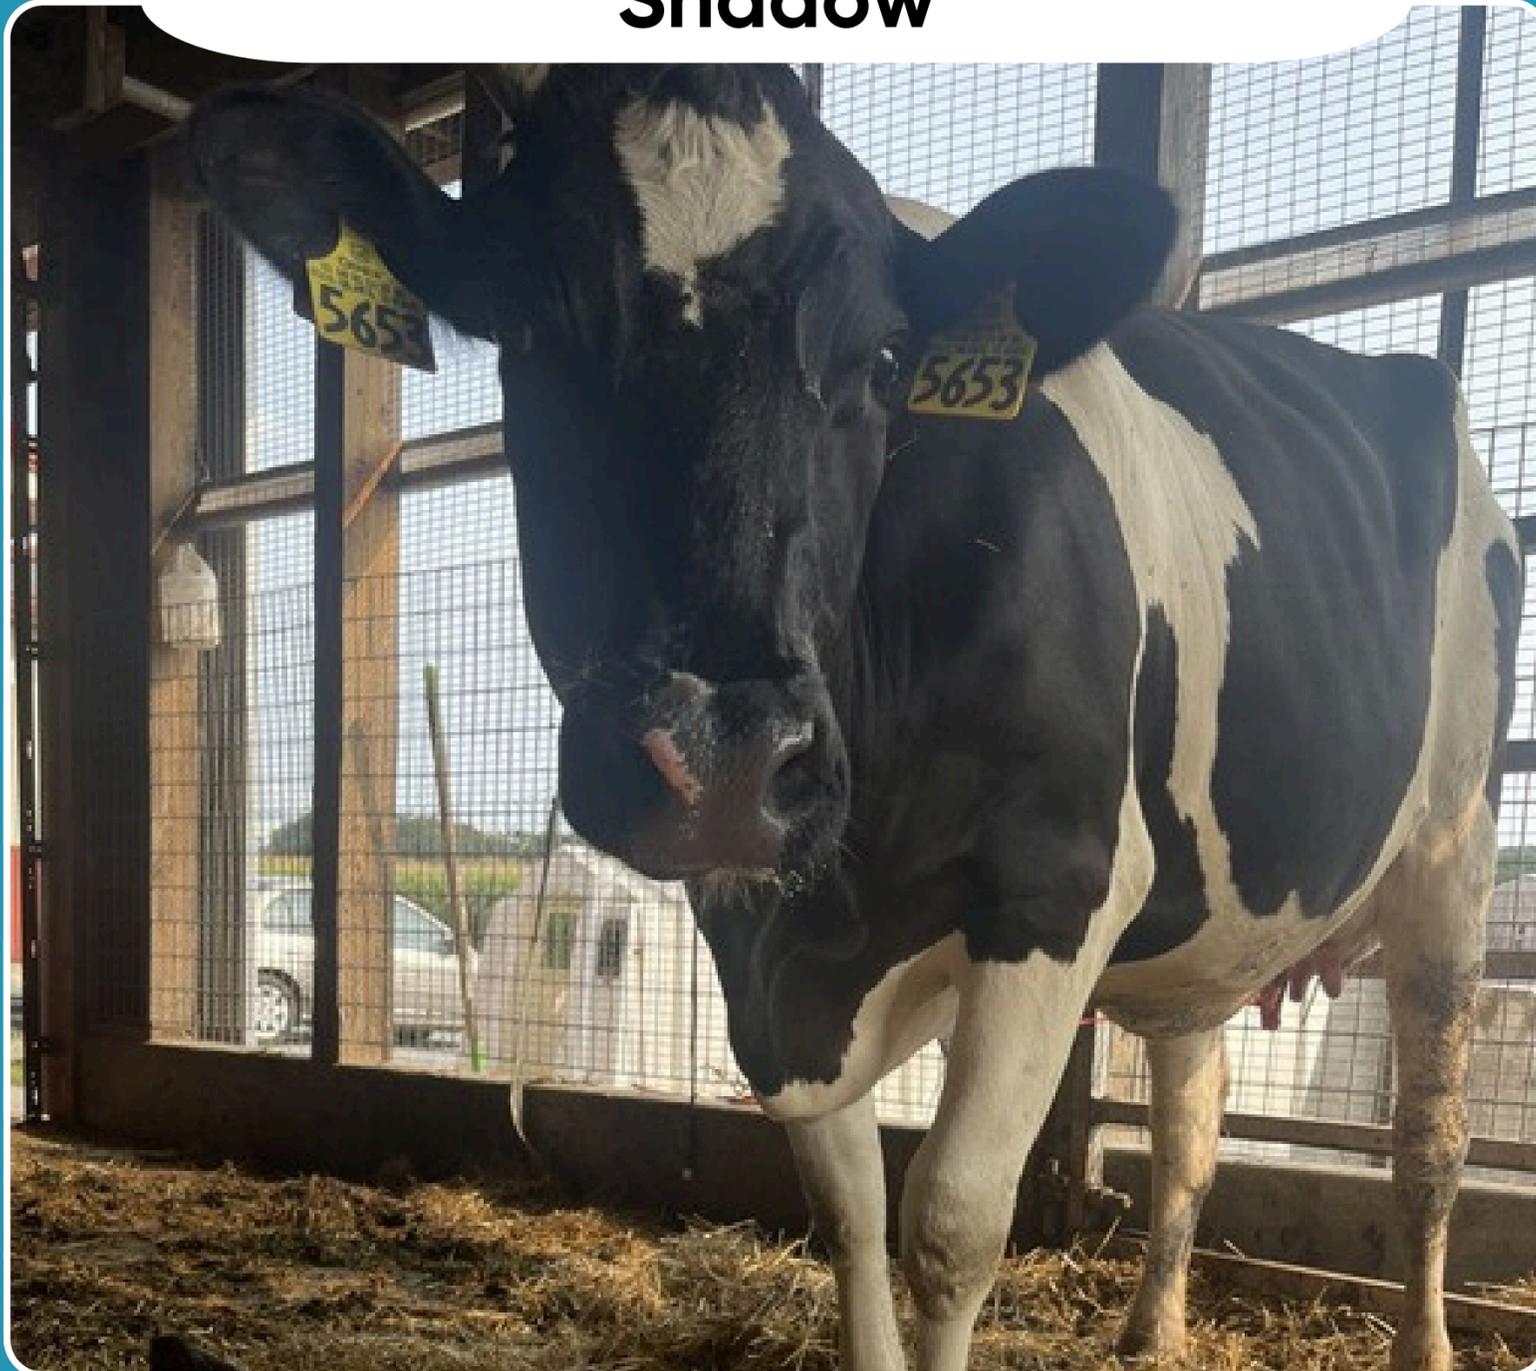

She sleeps on dried manure solids which helps to keep her clean, dry, and very warm!

All of the calves live together because it is easier to monitor their growth, feed intake, and see signs of sickness. It also teaches them how to socialize with other calves.

Mom's Update

Shadow

She has an important job on the farm which is to continue producing delicious and healthy milk each day for all of us to enjoy!

In order for her to continue producing milk, she will become pregnant and give birth to another calf in about one year.

She will be pregnant for 9 months. The first 7 months she will continue living with the herd, and the last 2 months, she will go on a vacation like a maternity leave. At this time, she will be called a dry cow. She will not produce milk during this time. Instead, she will focus her energy on growing a healthy calf.

Can you predict when she will have her next calf?

Fluff

Look how big she has gotten! At just 4 months old, she is as tall as a 2nd grader!

Kurtland Farms

